from the chairman

Another year is on its way out with valedictory dinners, swot vacs, end of year examinations, decisions about returning to Lincoln, applications from potential new residents, saying goodbye to friends and on occasion I expect not-so-friendly friends. Our world does move in annual cycles and the 2013 year has had some exceptional events and activities: some 40 years since women were first part of the Lincoln scene; the sad death of the Rev Dr Geoffrey Scott, former Principal, who left an incredible social justice legacy; the establishment of the Ervyn Whitehead scholarship; and the 2nd Red Threads art exhibition, to name a few.

Lincoln College's Council has had a busy year particularly in the development of a strategic plan for 2014-2018. University education is changing and we too must change to serve out residents more effectively. We must be in a position to develop our infrastructure so that it is a better fit for the new purposes and changed expectations it will have to meet in the period ahead. We need a comprehensive asset management plan and we have to research the suitability of existing assets for current and planned purposes.

We need to develop a business model for the College that supports collaborative relationships, strengthens our finances, and extends our reputational leadership. We are putting greater effort into philanthropy and fundraising and this is where our alumni come in. We thank all of you who have contributed to our giving cycle this year and look to an expansion in 2014. All our expenditures have to be subject to close fiscal scrutiny so that we know if what we are doing has the greatest positive effect. We know fees go up each year as costs rise and buildings decline. We have to market effectively so that we attract the very best students from South Australia, Australia, and overseas.

A new era lies ahead where we intend to put increased effort into program development and resident support. We want Lincoln to be known for its capacity to assist young scholars regardless of background, and to equip them to be well-rounded graduates and future leaders. We want them to be better because they came to Lincoln. In particular we are going to focus on the expanding digital requirements of academia to support the trend in our universities for more and more learning to occur outside formal class teaching settings.

As we move beyond 2013 so the 2014 cycle confronts us. We want the Lincoln strategic plan to support each resident to the fullest extent. If you have any reflections on what I have said do respond because our strategic plan is a working document to change as we change and not become dusty from sitting unused on a shelf, full of grand words but no clear implementation steps. It is indeed an honour to serve Lincoln as its Chair and I pay tribute to the work of my fellow Councillors for what they do as volunteers. All the Best for Christmas and the year ahead.

Chair of Council

in memory of Dr Scott

Rev Dr Geoffrey Scott

12 April 1939 - 9 August 2013

Principal 1984 - 1994

Dr Geoff Scott took office as the third Head (First Principal) of Lincoln College on 1 March 1984. He was born in Broken Hill. After formal studies he was ordained in 1964. He then had experience in rural parishes and graduate studies in the United States of America. Prior to his appointment at Lincoln, he was a member of the ministerial team of Maughan Church, Adelaide Central Mission.

Geoff was known for his proactive approach and new style of entrepreneurial principalship during his time at College. The library was upgraded, academic support systems were reviewed, the tutorial system was expanded in 1985 and computers came to the College in 1989. The concept of tutors as part of the care structure of the College made significant contribution to the quality of community life, the provision of academic resources, and of course the security of the building. The pastoral and social role of tutors located on each floor contributed to the stability and enjoyment of the residents' common life.

To make residence at Lincoln pleasant as possible, Geoff followed a tradition which his two predecessors had established by opening his residence to the College population from time to time. Geoff and his wife Suzanne sought to provide some compensation to young men and women who were obliged to live away from home if they were to receive the benefits of a university education.

Lincoln's close association with overseas students was brought closer during his term at College between 1984 to 1994. In 1990, Dr Scott approached University of Adelaide's administration about the possibility of additional overseas student accommodation being provided at Lincoln - a residential block linking the Keith Murray Building and Hambly Buildings - designed to accommodate a further sixty residents and to include other communal facilities. Originally referred as the International Building, this building was renamed Scott Building in recognition of the outstanding contribution of Geoff and Suzanne.

Geoff's legacy is very tangible at Lincoln. His dedication to the College will continue to benefit residents at Lincoln well into the future. His passing is a significant loss to the residents, staff and alumni of Lincoln College. The Lincoln College Council, Staff and committee members extend our deepest sympathies to Suzanne and the Scott family.

“Geoff was one of those ‘larger than life’ characters that we occasionally meet. But in the Lincoln context, he was one who had a passion for the College, its staff and students - for education and the Christian faith, which he sought to develop during his term as Principal.

His contribution to the Uniting Church in the areas of social justice and theological education are legendary. As a former student of Geoff’s and then as a colleague in ministry, I will miss his wisdom and encouragement which him a very special person for so many. His passion for various social justice issues provoked many of us in the church to reconsider our positions - and we were the better for doing so.”

arts at lincoln

More than 150 South Australian artists and college residents came together to celebrate diversity and friendship at the 2nd Red Threads Art Exhibition on 14 September.

Ed Douglas was named the Overall Winner of the professional category for a work titled “Gateway of the Manifold Secrets”. He was awarded a $2000 prize sponsored by Lincoln College, Netcraft and an anonymous donor.

2nd year Visual Art student, Taylor Schramm’s fresh approach in watercolour earned her the First Prize in the student section. She received $500 from UC Invest to further her artistic endeavors. “Taylor’s artwork is very striking and has a lovely energy to it. It was beautifully executed,” said Jack Condous, one of the student judges.

The professional section was judged by Rita Hall, Yasmin Grass and Gloria Goddard while Jack Condous, Ewart Shaw and last year’s People Choice’s winner Kate Watts assessed the student category.

The exhibition showcases more than 153 pieces of artwork from 85 professional artists, hobbyists and college residents.

The title of the exhibition reminds us of the invisible red thread that connects those destined to meet regardless of time, place or circumstance. Where Australian and International, student and expert, art work and viewer, art and artist all connect with a mysterious thread of common understanding in preparing for and experiencing the wonderful works shown in the corridor of Federation House. The thread may stretch or tangle, but it will never break, with the red in Chinese culture indicating good fortune and joy symbolising the aims of this exhibition.

Huge thank you to all those who made the exhibition such a success: the artists, the students, College Central staff, the curators, the judges, and above all those who have come to enjoy.

Organising Committee

It is hard to believe that it has been a year since the inaugural Red Threads exhibition which was so well received by both artists and art lovers. We are both thrilled and excited to be involved in the 2nd Red Threads exhibition which again showcases amazing artwork from the professional artists and the talented residents of Lincoln College. We would like to thank the Lincoln College Council and Principal Rebecca Pannell for supporting the exhibition, to friends at RSASA and FSASA, our generous sponsors and all at College Central for helping us both through the crazy times.

40 years of women

40 years ago, in 1973, Lincoln College opened its doors to female residents for the first time, under the auspices of Lincoln’s second Master, the Rev Dr John Whitehead. Lincoln was the first previously all-male College to accept female residents, and Dr Whitehead’s wife, Ervyn, was a crucial support for those first women at College – a fact celebrated by the inauguration of the Ervyn Whitehead Bursary. In those early years, women formed only 12% of the college, although that figure rose quickly by the late 1970’s and now hovers around the 50% mark. Women in College have taken important roles in the leadership teams over the years – Residential Tutors, Academic Tutors, Club Executive Members & Presidents, editors of The Stag, and Deans & Assistant Deans; and in 2007, the College had its first female Principal, Rebecca Pannell. In many ways, women’s position in College is assured.

As women continue to enter tertiary study in record numbers, it’s important to celebrate the achievements of the early pioneers in professional and academic areas, and also the successes of the current generation. While women are increasingly appointed to professional roles in equal numbers, there are still significant disparities in equal pay, appointment to senior positions, and recognition of candidates on the basis of merit, rather than gender. More than ever, today’s women in College need excellent role models – women who have blazed a personal and professional pathway, made sacrifices and compromises, and performed at the top of their game. They need your support and networking opportunities and we always appreciate our alumni returning to foster these relationships.

Dr Jordan Bell

Coeducation at Lincoln has definitely come a long way. We are grateful for and are proud of the women of Lincoln who have contributed in so many ways to society and the Lincoln community.

A huge thank you to everyone who attended the 40th Anniversary of Women at Lincoln Luncheon on 21 September.

scholarships

The Scholarship and Awards Committee received 21 scholarship applications this year. There was a strong field of candidates, many of whom would have been awarded a scholarship in previous years against other candidates. Several of the candidates have the potential to be Rhodes or Fulbright Scholars.

On 6 May 2013, the College was privileged to have Professor David Lloyd, Vice Chancellor and President of the University of South Australia address our College for the Scholarship and Awards Dinner.

Lincoln College and Lincoln College Council would like to congratulate the winners for their university and collegiate successes.

Through learning to faithfulness. This has been the guiding principle for the Academic Team of 2013. We strived this year to provide a supportive and positive academic environment for Lincoln residents; an environment that values academic, personal, and professional growth.

We began the year with a new team whose challenge was to deliver a well-rounded academic programme that served all Lincoln residents.

In Semester 1, the Academic Team ran 88 tutorials for Lincoln residents. This record number of tutorials represents a Herculean effort by the Academic Team, which comprised Academic Tutors, Sessional Tutors, and Peer Support Mentors. Tutorials are only one measure of the work conducted by the Academic Team this year – we also held numerous drop-in sessions, one-on-one mentoring sessions, and provided proof reading/essay writing assistance.

Wednesday nights were our dedicated Academic Nights, and they enabled the team to deliver general group sessions on a variety of topics. This year we held a kaleidoscope of sessions including the “The 7 Habits of Highly Effective Lincolnites”, “Essay Writing and Critical Thinking”, “Public Speaking”, “University Tips/Secrets”, “Referencing”, “Exam Techniques”, “CV/Resume Writing” etcetera. A Board Games Night held during Re-O’Week was particularly popular! We also ran our traditional Gelati/Ice Cream Nights in SWOTVAC.

We have held Panel Sessions and Networking Events for all cohorts. These events involved alumni and non-alumni who offered professional career advice and support to Lincoln residents. The style of these events varied from formal panel sessions to casual networking sessions with short presentations. These sessions enabled students to network, gain perspective and context for their current learning, and encouraged them to ask important questions about the value of extracurricular experiences.

We also held Cohort Mixer parties in order to strengthen relationships amongst current Lincoln residents. Academic Tutors, Sessional Tutors, and Peer Mentors attended – the relationships built in these events will form the basis of mentoring programs in 2014.

Furthermore, the Academic Team co-hosted several larger events, including the Lincoln College Leadership Development Seminar, the Health and Wellbeing Fair, and the Making The Most of Your College Experience event. These events included a bevy of alumni and non-alumni speakers: a STAR Officer, a magician, an emergency medicine doctor, a founder of an organisation dedicated to change in third world countries, several ex-College Club Presidents, and founders of charities. They spoke to Lincoln residents on topics as varied as “the 7 Habits of Highly Ineffective Leaders” to “The Value and Importance of Volunteering”. Their speeches were equal parts informative and transformative.

The Academic Team has been blessed by this year’s appointment of Terri Sandiford to the position of Lincoln College Librarian. Terri has done a magnificent job in ordering new textbooks, journals, magazines, equipment and more to ensure equitable resource allocation for all residents. The Library has become most organised place in College! Lincoln continues to offer the following academic resources to residents: the library (computer room, textbooks, anatomical models/charts, microscope and slides), clinical skills room (health sciences students), Room of Requirement (soldering iron, sewing machine), arts easels, architecture light box, tutorial rooms, music rooms, and several borrowable whiteboards.

The Academic Team has had an extremely productive year, and we have enjoyed the many challenges of serving such a diverse resident body. Next year, we aim to:

- Foster and grow relations with alumni through Networking Events/Panel Sessions;
- Foster and grow our connections with tertiary institutions;
- Diversify and improve subject coverage;
- Strengthen our arts and music culture;
- Monitor and engage with residents’ academic progress throughout the year; and
- Extend the availability and accessibility of Academic Resources (digital and non-digital).

First Place (Short Story)

Excerpt from 'My Sister'

By Renée Biele

The wind frosted around my ankles, slashing my exposed skin. I wish I had listened to my mother. Especially for Colette. She walked next to me, hands contorted about her face. She was whining slightly from the cold.

'Do you want my jacket, Colette?' I didn't need her going home with blue skin. Mama would never let me take her out again.

Colette ignored me. Her hands were tight on her cheeks, a shield like the ones to blind a horse. She couldn't let them see her.

The trees arched over us, hiding the little sun that had braved the winter day. The wind still whistled amongst the leaves, but my ankles were liberated for a moment. I liked the way the branches created a walkway, just for us. It made me feel like we were someone important. I could see the windows of the hotel at the edge of our park, framed in vines. When we were very little, Colette and I tested who could brave the run through the gates to be chased by the door man.

A man rugged in the fur of what appeared to be his dog trotted past, coming from the hotel. Colette gave a little squeak and darted away from him. The man gave her a look of confusion and aversion. I left him with a 'pardon' and followed her.

She ran through the muddy earth, the metamorphosed ground that ordinarily held long grass. I've known it to stretch all the way to my waist. The kind that doesn't hold insects.

Colette loved this park in Spring. The flowers were scattered through the lawns and she could carry them in the folds of her skirts. She used to count the petals for the boys at school. But it has been a long time since she'd done anything like that.

Colette was by the pond. Her shoes and socks were in a pile beside her. Her feet had not dared the water. But the colours of her toenails were a prominent blue as her skin paled. She looked out across the pond, not turning as I approached.

'Colette, come back from the water' I said gently. It always must be gently.

'What would happen if I dived in, Frances? Would my body simply freeze over?' she said, completely without emotion. Her childlike persona had been restrained in her voice, her mind returning to her own age, for a moment. That scared me more than anything.

'My dear, come back from the water.' I hated treating her like a little girl, but I didn't know what to do when she wasn't. Colette's arms were rigid against her body. Her breath was coming out in strong clouds. Mine had stopped completely. What would I do if she went in that water?

But after a frozen moment, Colette stepped back from the pond, wiped her feet, and slipped them back into her shoes. Her hands were cradled back around her features.

'Can we go to the playground now, Frances?' Innocence dripped in her voice.

'Yes, sweet. Yes we can.'

I pulled her reluctant grimy hand from her face and we made our way to the playground. At the sight of the slide, Colette let go of me and hurried forward, her face finally of smiles. I knew it would be chilled, and extremely dangerous. If I watched her though, surely she would be alright. I sat on my hat on the swing to protect my bottom, and started to sway back and forth evenly.

Second Place (Short Story)

Excerpt from 'The Present Eludes the Past'

By Alex Khominsky

My memory resonates happiness, yet I know the reality of the time was the antithesis of this. I have conveniently forgotten the hardships, as nostalgia for a time with my father sets in. A time of paradoxes; what I know I must have experienced: the cold, the monotony of hours I spent in queues for a ration of bread and the persecution of the Jewish people - the very reason I escaped with my family in the Russian Diaspora, and contrasted with what I now recall: the simple pleasures of spending time with my father as we cultivated beautiful assemblages of peoni, from their onset as seedlings to their fruition as brilliant flowers.

Has nostalgia rewritten my past? I find myself recalling details that my rational self tells me are outside personal experience. At what point had it ever been so warm in Ukraine that even the breeze was pleasant? Persecution prevented me from ever having my bar mitzvah or even calling myself Jewish. Perhaps emotion intensifies the subjective involvement to the point that we can create 'something new'.

Memory is fallible. It is the fragile 'scaffolding upon which all mental life is constructed'. I will always perceive my past and present reality through my 'flawed storehouse of ideas and experiences' and analogously to Gestalt's principles, our imagination fills in the gaps in the scaffolding. Thus, my current concerns and interpretation reinvents this pilgrimage to my childhood, and there is a sad irony that we attempt to create perfection in a reconstruction. By definition this reconstruction becomes an interpretation of reality and hence, I lose all clarity of 'what was'.

'Sun'

By Rosie O'Reilly

There's a sense
a feeling an inkling
that something is coming.
The darkness is complete surrounding enfolding
and yet...
The stars wink out, one by one.
You can't see it happening
but you realise there's a blue that wasn't there before.
Before there was blackness and now there are shapes that soon will be colours
and then will be things.
It's building forming preparing and then...
It slides into view and brings the world with it.

Boys' Night In

In 2013 Boys' Night In managed to raise over $2300 for the E.J.Whitten Foundation for prostate cancer research and awareness. Just like in 2012 the event was held in the Common Room to allow for enough room for activities and have access to the College Club Bar.

As would be expected of a Boys' Night In event the Common Room became an extravagant Man Cave for the 4 hours it was running. The boys organised small games amongst themselves involving FIFA on a TV brought in for the night, Pool on the recently re-felted pool table, table tennis and arcade games on the gaming machine that was brought in at the beginning of 2013.

These little games were fun and kept everyone enjoying themselves throughout the night but the Ultimate challenges of the night were the Food Challenge and the Strongest Man Competition. These 'sports' would truly show who had the healthiest prostate and would carry the respective title until 2014.

The Food Challenge called for the participation of about eight burly young men into a competition of 'who can down it the fastest'. One participant was knocked out each round with each round providing more and more greasy or difficult to eat foods. The deep-fryer behind the bar had a good work out for this occasion with Chiko Rolls, Killer Pythons, Mi Goreng and a whole serve of Pasta featuring in a few of the rounds. In the final round we saw last years' victor Steven Trumble defeated by a whole Chiko Roll. The one to show us all his flawless technique and emerge the new champion was Alexander (AJ) Duman.

The Strongest Man Competition saw about fifteen hopefuls enter and hold a bridge/plank as long as possible. Scott Boyle, the 2011 winner returned, determined to reclaim the belt after it was stolen from him in the 2012 BNI by Seb Kaczmarek. One by one the contestants fell to the ground and in the end Scott Boyle lasted an impressive six minutes fifteen seconds and walked away with the Strongest Man Belt for the second time. No doubt Scott will be there again in 2014 to defend his title, the question is whether or not there will be someone brave enough to challenge him.

Girls Night In: BREAST NIGHT EVER!

Girls Night In was held on 31 August to raise awareness about breast cancer and raise money for the Breast Cancer Foundation. The night was themed around an aeroplane trip to various countries, with tutors volunteering as "airline hostesses" and different residents arranging visits to "New York", "Germany", "Paris" and other great destinations.

meet the council

Lincoln College Council prides itself in attracting experienced and distinguished professionals and community members to its membership. They are sought out for their sound judgement and community spirit and genuine care for Lincoln's residents. The Council has welcomed a few new members this year: including Ms Sandra Milligan and Lincoln alumnus Mr Kym Boxall (1970 - 73).

Sandra Milligan

Sandra is a former teacher, educational researcher and Director of Curriculum in the schools sector in WA. She is the co-founder of The Good Universities Guides publishing and student support program.

Sandra is also an experienced company director and business operator. She has started-up and taken to market three of her own companies. She has worked at senior executive level in large multi-national companies and in government. She has served as director or committee member for a wide range of organisations, including large and small, for profit and not-for-profit, Australian and multi-national, commercial and government.

Sandra's current interests are in consumer affairs; application of online, digital and network technologies to publishing and education; and organisational governance and management.

Kym Boxall

Kym studied Law at the University of Adelaide. He came from Loxton and lived at Lincoln from 1970 to 1973. Kym was also on the College Club 1972.

After completing an Honours thesis in his fourth year at university, Kym has worked with the late Mr Ken Litchfield at Mollison Litchfield. His legal experiences includes working at Cridland & Bauer in Darwin where he specialised in commercial drafting, corporate law and conveyancing and property law. Kym also served as a solicitor and counsel with the Crown Solicitors Office before his appointment as a Magistrate.

Since being appointed as a Magistrate in 1982 he has served on numerous courts in SA, including the Adelaide Magistrates Court and Youth Court of South Australia.

Kym married Dianne at the end of 1973. Dianne was the College secretary at that time. They have two beautiful daughters, Elizabeth and Amanda.

For recreation Kym enjoys reading, listening to classical music and gardening.

LCAA & you

Hello everyone. As the incoming President of the Alumni Association I'd like to first and foremost thank the outgoing President Carly Cannon on her tenure as President, and for all the hard work she has put in to the Alumni Association. Her leadership has been instrumental to the success of the Association over the past few years and the success of the Annual Dinners is directly due to her efforts. Her commitment to the Association is greatly appreciated and I speak for the entire Committee on how pleased we are that she has agreed to continue with the Association as one of our Committee Members.

For those who don't know me, my name is Justin Ripper, and I would like to take this opportunity to introduce my self and the new Committee Representatives voted in at the AGM, held just prior to this year's Alumni Dinner. I lived at College for the two years of 1987-88 and have both vivid and blurry memories from those times. Blurry memories is something I'm sure that all Alumni can agree that they have (although some memories may be blurrier and some more clear). One thing that we all have in common from our years at College though, is the lasting friendships that we all made while we were there. I can't imagine anyone who doesn't have friends from College days that they don't continue to keep in contact with. The time between contact may vary, but when the opportunity to reconnect presents itself we are very happy to reacquaint ourselves. It was for this reason that, when I returned to Adelaide after several years of working and living interstate, I wanted to become involved with the Alumni Association and to reconnect with old friends.

As to the other members of the committee voted in at the AGM I'd like to introduce our new Vice President taking over from my previous role, Helen Ahrens. Helen has been consistently keen to be a part of the Alumni Association for some time now and she has been instrumental in setting up our new Alumni Facebook Page (<https://www.facebook.com/lincolncollegealumni>), which I urge everyone to check out as it is a great way to see what's going on in the Alumni world.

Our former Treasurer, Ria Damp, was unable to continue with the Committee as her career has led her to Darwin. She was a great Treasurer for us and was always ready to take part in all of the Alumni's endeavours and will be sorely missed. We wish her well with her new life in the Northern Territory and she promises to let us know when she will be back visiting so we can all catch up for a drink. Keep an eye out on Facebook for such visits as hers and I urge any Alumni who would like to catch up with people when they visit Adelaide to contact the committee as we can post announcements of your visit on the Alumni Facebook page, if you so desire.

As Ria was no longer available to continue as Treasurer, I invited my good friend Don Manifold to take on the role and it has been a great delight for me for him to agree. Don and I have been friends since our days in Mount Gambier and with his high standing at Ernst & Young it is fantastic that he agreed to take over the role from Ria.

Dorothy Eiffe, who needs no introduction for those who came to the Alumni Dinner (I'll talk more about this in the Alumni Dinner wrap up), is continuing on as the associations Secretary. Dot is a wonderful person whose commitment to the Committee and help in organising events has been invaluable ever since she took over the role of Secretary from Jane Bekesi (Jane being whisked away to Sydney by her career) the previous year.

Finally we have our two Committee members Carly as I mentioned, and Phil Kernick, another alumni heralding from Don's and my time at college. Phil has been instrumental in keeping the Association's formal documentation and Constitution in order as well as setting up our Lincoln Alumni email accounts and we all sincerely appreciate his efforts.

We have had other committee members who have generously donated their time over the years when they could and I'd like to thank them as well, Rachel Bills (nee Jennings), Ingrid Bunker, Scott Hammerton and Gwendolyn Huang to name a few. They have committed as much time as their busy lives have allowed towards the Alumni's goals of reconnecting people, which I thank them for and wish them all well in their future endeavours.

That sums up the introductions and acknowledgements I wished to make but I do want to also mention that we have two more spaces remaining unfulfilled on the Committee and I urge anyone who thinks they would like to join, to contact us (either via college or via our email, listed on the Alumni Association page of the Lincoln College website, <http://www.lincoln.edu.au/asp/ alumni.aspx>). I feel that the Alumni Association is all about reconnecting with the community through lasting friendships, the events we hold and the contributions that we make as a whole back to the College. So if anyone is interested in contributing some of their time towards these endeavours we would be more than pleased to hear from you. For those of you who would like to reconnect with Alumni but cannot afford the time to be on the committee, feel free to contact us to use our Facebook page. We are more than happy to post notifications on satellite events. These may be more specific to Alumni groups in terms of era, location (rural, interstate or overseas) or other events.

alumni dinner 2013

The Alumni Dinner, the highlight event of the year for the Alumni Association, was held at Ayers House on North Terrace in the city on the Saturday evening of May the 26th. A brief AGM was held beforehand and with the new Committee elected the evening began with pre dinner drinks at the foyer bar. This gave people the opportunity to arrive and reacquaint themselves with old friends and new and the dinner then commenced properly when everyone moved into the Henry Ayers dining room. The formal part of the evening began with a speech from the outgoing President Carly Cannon, who introduced the new committee and gave an update on the Alumni Committees efforts in the previous year. Steven Trumble, the current College Club President, then gave a reply speech giving everyone a view of current student experiences at College; followed by Bec Pannell, the current Principal, who gave an update of the College as a whole. The highlight of the evening though was the speech by Dot Eiffe. Being the 40th anniversary of women in College the Alumni Committee was keen to have a guest speaker who could talk about what it was like to be amongst the first women to go to College and that she did. The gathered Alumni were enthralled by her stories which transported us back to what life was like in those early days of college. Following Dot's speech, dinner was served and the formal part of the evening was finished off with a short speech by Rick Burge who not only also spoke of college times past, but also promoted the upcoming Rick Burge Run Winery Tour. The Rick Burge Winery Tour is a new Alumni event the Committee had organised, with Rick's support.

The evening was a great success with everyone enjoying themselves and the Committee have agreed that we will have the dinner at Ayers House again next year. The date to put in your diary is Saturday, May the 31st, 2014. I urge everyone to come along as we are hoping for an even bigger and better dinner next year. We especially want to urge people who were at College in the previous decade anniversaries to make next years dinner a real reunion event. So if you were at College in 1954, 64, 74, 84, 94 or 2004, start thinking about getting a group together for next year's dinner. If anyone wants to champion a reunion for these years, feel free to contact the Alumni Committee, as we may be able to help rally Alumni through email or our Facebook page. Until then I hope everyone has a great Christmas break and a fantastic New Year in 2014.

As a new event this year it was decided by the Committee, in collaboration with Rick Burge, to hold a bus tour to the Barossa Valley for Alumni. The bus departed from outside Lincoln, and for the lucky few who took part, we were quickly transported to the Burge Family Winemakers vineyard. Once there our hosts kindly treated us to a wonderful lunch of local produce while we tasted a selection of Rick's wines. After lunch, glass in hand, Rick then took us on a tour of the winery telling us the history and make up of not only his winery but the local area in general. From Rick's we then moved on to Rockford Wines where we were treated to a tasting of their complete range of wines including their Basket Press Shiraz. A treat for all involved. We then finished off the day with our last stop at Bethany Winery where we were once again privileged to taste their entire range of wines before heading back home to Adelaide. Overall it was a fantastic day and a big thankyou to all our winery hosts but most especially to Rick and his Personal Assistant Libbi who made the day with the lunch at their winery.

Rick himself dubbed the day as the Inaugural LAWC (Lincoln Alumni Wine Club) Visit and we are hoping to expand the LAWC concept to other wine appreciating Alumni events in the future. For those who missed out on the tour this year, we are planning another tour for next year, so keep an eye out for that one and other LAWC events.

Visit www.burgefamily.com.au for more information about the Burge Family Winemakers.

alumni story

Tales of the Fifties - Lincoln from an Oversea Student's Perspective

As requested, I, William P.S. TAN, am putting to paper some of my memories of college days from 1959 to 1961. I came up in 1959 from the Anglo-Chinese School in Singapore to study Engineering and left in 1961 to continue the course in Aeronautical Engineering at Sydney University.

I applied to Adelaide and Lincoln rather at the last minute and when I arrived at the airport after transiting through Perth and then Sydney (in those days there were no flights from Perth to Adelaide) there was no one to meet me so I got a lift from a student who happened to be returning to St Marks College.

First few days were a refreshing experience and one memory sticks out... a friendship with George Poulos from Broken Hill (I think he shortened his name from Papadopoulos) who confessed to me that he had never seen the sea. We rectified this by 'borrowing' two bicycles and pedalled the 7 or 8 odd miles to Glenelg along the Anzac Highway. A trip I shall never forget.

In those early days it was a great comfort to be befriended by some seniors like Sam Abraham. He was always jovial and full of jokes. I only remember one but unfortunately it cannot be repeated! It starts with 'What is the definition of a 'Mistress'?... Then there was one night when he was rather late for dinner and had no time to put on the necessary clothing so he turned up bare chested and only covered by the gown! One day he was asked by a old lady from Tasmania whether back home he still lived up a tree. Yes, he said and so do all of us! But what about the Australian High Commissioner? Oh, he lives in a bigger tree! When he left for home taking a very early train from the station the entire college turned up to wish him farewell, at 5am! He was visibly touched.

From Brougham Place it was a very pleasant walk to the University, passing a Koala Reserve, long since gone. One day rumours went round the college that there was a Koala in a student's room. Sure enough propped up on a broken branch of an Eucalypt at the corner of a room in the Annex was the said Koala. This creature was there for some days. I never knew who was responsible for this prank.

Soon after arrival a few of us acquired some form of motorcar. KC Cheong bought a VW Beetle. He took a few of us to Waterfall Gully, my first excursion to the Adelaide Hills. I got myself a Triumph 150cc motorbike. During a vacation I rode all the way to Melbourne via the Princess Highway beside the Coorong. In those days this highway was badly corrugated and the vibrations caused a nut to come off. As it secured the seat to the frame it couldn't be more critical! Fortunately a farm was close by and I went in to ask for help. In no time at all the farmer found a suitable nut from his workshop, fixed it, and I was on my way! Howard Liu bought a scooter. One day as he was returning to the college along Frome Road a door opened from a parked car and he slammed into it. He suffered concussion and was in rehab for three months lying very still in a darkened room.

In 1960 Lee Ping Wen arrived. He was an old classmate from ACS Singapore and was as astonished to see me as I was to see him. We got reacquainted and had many walks around the college after dinner, still in our gowns! The locals were bemused.

Years later when the Hamblys visited Singapore Ping Wen asked the Reverend to give a sermon at the Fort Canning Wesley Church and he very kindly did so.

I took up Hockey and played for the college and the University. Whenever I had a muscle strain I would go to Pritam Singh for his soothing massage. He studied physiotherapy and had a room in the Annex. Richard Yung was another senior overseas student. He studied medicine. One day he came into the dinning room pretty flustered and announced that he had spent the past three days at Wilpena Pound searching for a lost boy. Howard Liu has since told me that he too took part in the search. At that time he said he was working at Port Pirie so Wilpena wasn't too far away. Unfortunately the boy was not found until the body was discovered years later. Many years afterwards it turned out that the lost boy was the brother of the South Australian Premier Don Dunstan.

In 1960 two WA students turned up to study Chemical Engineering . I think their names are Terry Roberts and Brian Crews. What is memorable is that the next year they returned with an antique Rolls Royce having driven it through the Nullabor which in those days was just a dirt road.

One day it was announced in the press that the RAF would be flying an Avro Vulcan over Adelaide after taking off from the airport on its way home to England. A few of us went to the roof of the new building in some anticipation. Sure enough in mid-morning a huge delta wing aircraft flew directly overhead. It was a most impressive sight, especially for one who is interested in Aviation. Unfortunately on arrival at London Heathrow the Vulcan stalled and crashed but not before the Air Marshall and his captain ejected.

thank you!

"Attending university had always been a goal of mine, so having the opportunity to do so, while being in such a supportive environment at Lincoln has been a great experience thus far.

Studying Medicine at the University of Adelaide is immensely rewarding. I have always aspired to a career in medicine, I believe that there would be no better reward than ensuring the wellbeing of those who are ill.

I am very grateful to receive this bursary. Thank you for this opportunity and the role you have taken in contributing to the success of college students."
